

Challenges in the management of chronic wound infections

Marco Falcone^{1*}, Barbara De Angelis², Federico Pea³, Alessandro Scalise⁴, Stefania Stefani⁵,
Rolando Tasinato⁶, Orazio Zanetti⁷, Luca Dalla Paola⁸

¹ Division of Infectious Diseases, Department of Clinical and Experimental Medicine, University of Pisa, Pisa (Italy), ² Surgical Science Department, Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery, University of Rome "Tor Vergata", Rome (Italy), ³ Alma Mater Studiorum, University of Bologna, University Hospital IRCCS Policlinico Sant'Orsola Malpighi, Bologna (Italy), ⁴ Clinic of Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery, Department of Experimental and Clinical Medicine, Marche Polytechnic University, Ancona (Italy), ⁵ Department of Biomedical and Biotechnological Sciences, Biological Tower, University of Catania, Catania (Italy), ⁶ Azienda Sanitaria Locale 3 Serenissima del Veneto, Department of general and vascular surgery, Venice (Italy), ⁷ Alzheimer Unit, IRCCS S. Centro Giovanni di Dio "Fatebenefratelli", Brescia, (Italy) ⁸ Maria Cecilia Hospital, Cotignola, (Italy)

Running title: Management of chronic wound infections

Key words: chronic wound infections, wounds, antisepsis, antiseptic agents, wound healing

Article type: narrative review

Word count: 4232

Corresponding author: Marco Falcone
Department of Clinical and Experimental Medicine, University of Pisa, Pisa
Via Paradisa 2, 56124, Pisa (Italy)
Email: marco.falcone@unipi.it

SUPPLEMENTARY MATERIALS

Supplementary Table 1. Search terms used for literature search

- Chronic wound infections OR Wounds OR Skin and skin structure infections OR Ulcers OR Diabetic foot infections
- Antibiotic use
- Multidrug resistance
- Antisepsis OR antiseptic agents
- Healing
- Biofilm
- Debridement
- Wound bed preparation
- Methicillin-resistant Staphylococcus aureus